POETICAL.

FOR LOVE'S SAKE.

Sometimes I am tempted to murmur
That life is fitting away,
With only a round of trifles
Filling each busy day—
Dusting the nooks and corners,
Making the house look fair,
And patiently taking on me
The burden of woman's care.

Comforting childish sorrows,
And charming the childish heart,
With the simple song and story
Told with a mother's art,
Setting the dear home table,
And clearing the meal away,
And going on little errands
In the twilight of the day.

One day is just like another!
Sewing and piecing well
Little jackets and trousers,
So neatly that none can tell
Where are the seams and joinings—
Ah! the seamy side of life
Is kept out of sight by the magic
Of many a mother and wife.

And oft when I am ready to murmur
That time is fitting away
With the self same round of duties
Filling each busy day,
It comes to my spirit sweetly,
With the grace of a thought divine:
"You are living and toiling for love's sake,
And the loving should never repine.

"You are guiding the little footsteps
In the way that they ought to walk,
You are dropping a word for Jesus
In the midst of your household talk;
Living your life for love's sake,
Till the homely cares grew sweet—
And sacred the self-denial
That is laid at the Master's feet.

SELECT STORY.

UNEXPECTED PROOF;

OR, DENOUEMENT OF A STAGE COACH TRAGEDY.

I was traveling agent for a large firm, and in the course of business visited the flourishing little town of Bellair, where our people had many customers. It was about the middle of August, and on the very night of my arrival that usually quiet and sober place was thrown into a state of consternation by the occurrence of a very unusual circumstance. The stage coach was accustomed to arrive about 8 o'clock, but on the day in question that hour passed and the stage did not come in.

The timekeeper was in a state of great agitation, walking to and fro, and wondering what had become of the coach.

It was at last supposed that some accident must have befallen the coach, and assistance was being prepared in the shape of horsemen to search the road. These were nearly ready, but when just upon the point of starting, the loud blast of the coachman's horn was heard, and anxiety as to the safety of the stage was exchanged for wonder as to the cause of its delay. A few moments later it drove up in due form before the office, and a little crowd gathered to investigate the origin of such an unusual circumstance.

The coachman, upon being questioned, gave a very clear and simple explanation of the affair. A passenger, he said, had suddenly insisted on alighting, and had banged the door so violently that one of the horses had taken fright. This had startled the other horse, and the two had galloped madly away, nearly demolishing the coach, and were not brought to until one of them fortunately stumbled and hurt his fore leg severely, causing considerable delay. The appearance of the horse witnessed to the truth of this statement. Every one was for the moment satisfied with this account of the delay, but only for a moment, for the next instant a much more exciting and horrible discovery than the delay of the coach was made.

One of the porters lounging about very naturally opened the coach door and prepared to assist the passengers to alight. But no one stirred within. It was too dark to see, but the porter putting his hand in, felt the person of a human being, as he thought, very wet, and who must, from his insensibility, either be sleeping or else was, perhaps, stunned by the accident on the road.

"Hellos, John!" cried he, "who the duce have you got here? The old gentlemen's either deadly asleep, or else he's fainted when the horses ran off!"

The coachman, whose name, it may here be stated, was John Rush, replied very calmly:

"Oh, he's all right, Bill. Him and his pal had a tiff, but I fancy they'd been drinkin', and now he's got asleep."

Saying so, he brought forth a lantern, the light of which Bill afterward thought made him deadly pale. They, however, cast the light into the coach upon the sleeping gentleman, but the next second they drew back with a shout of terror. Bill saw by the light that it was not the rain which had damped his hands; the stain upon them could not be mistaken. "It's blood! It's blood!" he cried, shaking the thick crimson drops from his fingers.

As for poor Rush, the coachman, he looked on in blank amazement, like a man stricken dumb. The noise which Bill made attracted the attention of all around, who were now only just beginning to guess at the cause of the delay. A scene of terrible excitement followed. The whole street was in confusion. It was discovered that the coach contained only one passenger or rather his corpse, for he lay in a pool of blood quite dead, and it was evident that he had been most foully murdered. Examination showed that he was a man in the prime of life, well dressed, and of gentlemanly appearance, but without purse, pocketbook, papers, or any other arcticle by which he could be identified, excepting a small envelope with two cards in it—supposed to be his own—and bearing the name of Samuel Robinson. It was evident that he had been stabbed suddenly in the neck, and death must have been almost instantaneous.

The excitement at Bellair was very great. The proper officials were sent for and an investigation made. Every one was questioned as to who the murderer could be and what steps could be taken to effect his capture. As might be expected, all eyes were turned to Rush, the coachman, who was naturally supposed to be likely to know something about the matter. In fact, some people even suggested that he might possibly know more than he cared to tell; but this was only scandal. He was very calm and collected, and, stating to the police authorities that he thought he could give valuable information, he accompanied them to the station.

There he made the following important statement: He had started, he said, from Woodley, in the morning, with five passengers. This, of course, could be verified by reference to the officials there. At various places, so he said, he had set down five passengers. He had also taken up two, but did not remember what they were like, as he thought nothing about them at the time; could not say even if the two were men or women; thought they had alighted on the way, and that the gentleman in the coach was one of those who started first at Woodley. When about two miles on the other side of Winfield Hollow he heard what seemed to him to be a violent dispute going on inside the coach. He stopped the horses and went to the door. Only two passengers were then inside—one a young man with dark eyes and chestnut hair, and the other he could swear was the murdered man. They seemed to be in high dispute, but when they saw him, and knew that their altercation had stopped the coach, the murdered man—he was certain he could swear it was the murdered man—put his head out of the window and said:

"What do you want? My friend and I had a few harsh words, and what is that to you?"

When he heard this he remounted the box. About five minutes later one of the gentlemen stopped him to get out, seeming to be much agitated, which he supposed to be on account of the dispute. He did not notice at the time which gentleman left, but could certainly swear it was the murdered man who had spoken to him from the window, and who appeared to be the principal in the dispute. A very few minutes after the unknown gentleman left the murdered man the accident occurred which prevented the coachman from any very close remembrance of particular incidents.

Rush, the stage coachman, appeared to be much troubled during his examination by the police, which was very natural, as he had good reason to know that he would be greatly blamed, and would probably in the end be dismissed for carelessness. It is no pleasant thing to drive a coach, and to have people murdered in it. He was, however, much relieved when he found that his conduct, on account of the excitement occasioned by the accident, was not considered to be very culpable, and that he was only bound over to attend and give evidence at the inquest, which he was very willing to do.

The inquest was held in due course. Mr. Pritchard, the Coroner, being an active, sensible man, nothing was left undone which might subserve the ends of justice. Several people were called as witnesses, but only three gave evidence of any consequence. The first was the clerk at the office where the coach started. He gave the names of the passengers booked, but could not identify the murdered man.

The next was the coachman, John Rush, whose tale was much as has been already told.

The most important point in his evidence was that he affirmed that the murdered man spoke a little huskily through his nose, and had a way of lisping out his words so that even in the midst of the fight he could hardly help laughing at him.

All this evidence he gave in a clear, straightforward manner, such as, it was thought, proved him beyond a doubt to have no complicity in the foul deed.

The third witness was the porter who discovered the dead body; and after these were one or two others who were present at the time, including the medical men who examined the corpse.

The coroner summed up with great ability, and the jury, without a moment's consideration, returned a verdict of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown.

The next day the body of the murdered man was buried, and the police renewed their search, but everybody saw that after a little fuss on the part of the newspapers, the tragedy of the Belair stage would most probably become one of those mysteries which wait for elucidation and punishment until the day of doom. Strange to say, however, the perpetrator of the crime was discovered, and convicted on his own evidence; and the very means which he adopted to hide the deed were the occasion of it being brought to light, as I shall now briefly explain.

The town of Bellair was about forty or fifty miles from Woodley, and the stage ran between the two places. A few miles from Woodley was another small town called Oakbourne, and in Oakbourne lived a widow fair, named Conway, and her daughter.

Mrs. Conway had a brother who was deaf and dumb. His name was Thomas Ellwood. His affliction, as might be supposed, was a source of great trial to his family, and had his parents been poor it would probably have made his course in life much harder than it really was; but his father, old Mr. Ellwood, had but two children, the eldest a girl—who married while young a certain Mr. Conway—and Thomas, of whom I am about to speak.

After Jane Ellwood became Mrs. Conway she saw very little of her own family, for her mother was already dead, and in less than a year after her wedding day she lost her father, and now her only surviving relative was her brother Thomas.

To Thomas Ellwood his father left almost all that he possessed, saying that his daughter, being married, wanted little, and that poor Tom could do nothing for himself. "Poor Tom," however, at the time of our story, was no longer a boy, for he had nearly reached his 40th year, but he had never married. His sister, Mrs. Conway, was older than himself, and had an only child, a daughter, now about 17 years of age, called after her mother, Jane.

Jane had great expectations, for not only was her widowed mother well-to-do in the world, but her uncle, Thomas Ellwood, had declared that he was, on account of his infirmity, likely to spend his days in bachelorhood, he would leave all his property to her. Jane had, moreover, a lover, a right good young man, to whom her mother had promised that she should in due time be united, which meant whenever Uncle Ellwood found opportunity, as he had promised, to settle a certain large sum upon her. But Uncle Ellwood had hitherto neglected doing so, chiefly on account of an innate dislike which he had to doing business with lawyers. But time and love would allow of no longer delay. Uncle Tom had promised his sister and niece that he would arrange about the property early in the month of August, which had already begun; but when, two days after, he called at Mrs. Conway's house, he allowed that he had totally forgotten all about it. This confession was, of course, all made by dumb show, as from his birth he could not utter a word, and Mrs. Conway's discourse, as she scolded him, fell upon deaf ears. Thomas was a good-natured soul, and his sister carelessly thought it did not matter how she rated him; but although he heard never a word, poor Tom's heart was grieved, for he knew that he had vexed his sister.

Mr. Ellwood of course could not reply, although, with the usual tact of afflicted people, he made a shrewd guess at what his sister said. He carried a little tablet and pencil always about with him, and now he wrote:

"I'll go to Woodley to-morrow, Jane, the stage from Oakbourne to Woodley starts at 6, and I'll go over."

Mrs. Conway read the sentence and then smiled and nodded assent. The two were reconciled, and the rest of the evening passed off pleasantly enough. Jane's lover, Fred, had to go early, but Uncle Tom had to go to supper. Jane and her mother went with him to the gate, and there bade him good night.

Mr. Ellwood then went straight home to his lodgings, and after arranging with his landlady to rouse him early the following morning he went to bed. When the morning came he packed up a few necessaries, directed his luggage to Woodley—for he was a punctual man—and then, after telling the landlady that he was going to that town for a day or two, he left. He booked from Oakbourne by the 6 o'clock stage and arrived early in Woodley. The next day his sister received a letter from that town, stating that after seeing his lawyer he found it necessary to go on to Bellair, but would return the next day.

The next day and the next came, but Thomas Ellwood never came back again. In his letter he stated that the business in question might have been done by an agent, but Mrs. Conway's impatience and angry words had so agitated him that he had resolved to go on at once and do everything himself. He finished his letter with an expression of love, but Mrs. Conway never forgot or forgave her own hasty words to which he alluded.

As day after day passed, Mrs. Conway, finding her brother still mysteriously absent from home, and that, as far as she could learn, he had not only been away for a much longer time than business could require, but had never been seen since, began to be much agitated, especially as every one was talking of a horrible murder in the Bellair coach.

At last she went to Bellair, and when she learned how the victim had said this and that, she thought little about it, for she knew poor Tom had no power to speak. One evening, however, she saw a drunken man rolling home. Like other fools of his class, he scattered all he had about him, and Mrs. Conway's eyes fell upon a small letter case which she knew belonged to Ellwood. She picked it up, followed the drunkard, saw where he lived, and then applied to the Magistrate. The drunkad was arrested. He proved to be none other than the coachman, John Rush, who could not, however, account fairly for the case. Drunk as he was, he was too sensible to betray himself. He was, however, held to bail, which, as he could not give, he was, of course, locked up.

The next day he was brought before the Magistrate and examined. Mrs. Conway swore that the letter case belonged to her missing brother. The coachman swore that he bought it, with some other trifles, of a peddler whom he met in the street, and as there was no evidence to refute this statement he was at once discharged. Rush now saw that he was likely to become an object of suspicion, and prepared to flee.

Meanwhile the detective police, having at last a clue which even a blind man could not help but follow, set to work again in earnest. They saw Mrs. Conway and suggested to her that it was her brother Ellwood who had been murdered, and that perhaps the coachman knew more of the affair than he chose to allow. This suspicion she of course at once declared to be groundless, as her brother, being deaf and dumb, could not have spoken as the coachman asserted. A warrant, however, was obtained for exhuming the body of the murdered man. Mrs. Conway at once recognized her brother.

Rush was now again arrested, although the Magistrate was greatly opposed to the proceeding, as he justly stated that there was not sufficient evidence to justify an arrest. A well-known lawyer, Mr. Chancery, however, came forward and clearly showed that if Rush, having every facility for forming a proper, judgment, had sworn solemnly that the deceased had said such and such things, the deceased being—as was now fully proved—deaf and dumb from birth, he must either have deliberately committed perjury, or else he must have some complicity in the bloody deed, or possibly he might be guilty of both. This argument, coming from a man like Mr. Chancery, was listened to with proper attention. The coachman was again taken into custody and committed for trial.

He was arraigned at the next sessions. Had he only murdered the unfortunate Mr. Ellwood and said nothing about it he might possibly have escaped. But he condemned himself out of his own mouth by swearing at the inquest that a man, now proved to be born dumb, had said certain things to him. When brought up for trial he came in with an air of defiance and proposed to brazen out the whole matter. But when, after he had again been minutely questioned about what the murdered man said, and had sworn to it, other witnesses of undoubted character proved that the unfortunate man never could speak; then turning to the Judge, the criminal said: "The game is played out," and fainted.

The jury brought in a verdict of wilful murder against John Rush.

It would, however, appear that all that the guilty man said about the beginning of the fatal journey was true. Mr. Ellwood did really leave his hotel to go to the post, but being anxious to arrive in Bellair that day, and seeing the stage already started, rounding the corner, he got into it without returning for his luggage. The other passengers alighted at their several destinations, and he was left alone. Rush had some slight knowlof him, and believing him to carry a large sum had, when he found his victim left without protection, stopped the coach, and in an unguarded moment stabbed him in the neck. His first idea after pillaging the murdered man was to bury him on the spot, but fearing discovery he hid his spoils a little way off in the woods, and then concocted a story to account for the delay of the coach—wounding the horse himself so as to bear out his tale.

Dramatic Academies.

When we were admonished in our copy-books to live and learn, the most of us would have preferred that method to studying to learn. But the copy-book was right, it is only by living that we learn. What copy-book would ever have told us, for example, that the wonderful men and women, with the wanderful things they say and do on the stage, are the result of a spontaneous conjunction? There isn't a copy-book in the universal curriculum that would have taught a man that! But it is a fact. The world that has been going to the theatre in growing numbers since the circus became a nomad, would never have dreamed, we dare say, that the glass of fashion and mould of form held up for public instruction, had never been created by study or refined by artistic application.

In other words seriously, the world is just reminded by a meeting in London, at Irving's Lyceum, that of the vast number of actors and actresses who have interpreted every phase of human emotion, from Shakespere at the Globe, in Houndsditch, to Wallack in his new Broadway shell, none have been schooled. A man must serve an apprenticeship to make boots, or gloves, or bread, or what not; a man, even be he a genius, must serve long years of apprenticeship to plead at the bar; to sit in judgement; to discount notes; to write a newspaper paragraph: a man must be long and well-trained to take a pulpit; to practice or teach the science of medicine—in short, it is only the poet who is born and not made, and yet even he must learn the variations that make his verse, the history that graces his figures, the science without which his measure is empty. But the man or woman who is to combine in the subtlest shape all these callings, walks from the night of ignorance to the light of fulfillment. The actor's profession is the only one which has neither school nor academy, methods of instruction or standards of degree. So eminent person—ages in the ranks, suddenly aroused to the grotesque attitude of the stage, come together in London to devise a national school for dramatic teaching, such as exists in France, in Bavaria, in Prussia, in Saxony, in Austria, in Russia. The speeches were made by men who have amused and delighted audiences, but Toole himself never personated anything funnier than his own character as he stood there owning that his mind never received an hour's training for the undertaking of the masterpieces he has for years displayed to delighted and critical audiences.

We wonder how many people who go to our home theatres ever reflect on the anomaly of the situation. Houses are filled with spectators to witness the characterizations of personages whom the actors cannot possibly present, since they not only have none of the training requisite, but they want in the historical knowledge as well as the insight into metaphysical conditions, without which the actor is a mere mummer and the stage a derision. In one sense, however, experience is a species of education, as the careers of many of our illustrious actors attest. Were it not for this, our American dramatic art would rank even lower than it does—for while we have some eminent students of the drama and conspicuous exponents of the passions, they are rare and only once in a lifetime supported.—Press.

Poison in Every Day Food.

Committees of experts tell of adulteration in food that is simply appalling. Were the ingredients which are mixed with food innocuous it would still be a very great hardship; but when it is known that the most violent poisons are employed it is a marvel that the whole country does not rise up and put a stop to such practices and punish all dealers who sell poisonous articles of food. If confirmation of these startling statements were needed one has only to read the facts recently brought to light in Chicago, where it is impossible to find pure sugar and where not ten per cent. of the milk is good. In that city the bread without exception, is poisonous; the teas were never imported, but are made of leaves "faced" with Prussian blue and chromate of lead. Seventy-five per cent. of the cream of tartar is white earth, and the coffee coated with lamp-black. But Chicago is no worse than other cities. Baking powders are largely composed of alum. Pickling fluid is diluted with sulphuric acid, alum and verdigris to give it a peculiar flavor.

The manufacture of a great deal of our confectionary should be punished as a crime, for much of the candy sold to children is simply a lump of white earth, made attractive to the eye with arsenical paint, and sweetened with glucose. Costly spices are counterfeited in a terribly grotesque manner, the flavoring being given by the rankest poisons. In these and other adulterations arsenic plays the largest part. We import annually 2,000,000 pounds of this deadly poison—one cent's worth of which would kill 2,800 people—and the bulk of this import is used in preparation of food and clothing.

Bad breath arises from the stomach, and can be easily corrected if you take Simmons Liver Regulator. It is peculiary adapted to the stomach, correcting acidity, destroying foul gases and allaying inflammation. Take, after eating, a half-teaspoonful, it assimilates with the food and ensures perfect digestion, without which that repulsive disorder, bad breath, must ensue. The Regulator removes biliousness, cures dyspepsia, constipation and sick headache, si purely vegetable and harmless.

THE COLUMBIAN.

G. E. ELWELL, J. K. BITTENBENDER, } Editors.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

—FRIDAY, JUNE 9th, 1882.—

Garibaldi, the great Italian General, is dead.

The supreme court has ruled in a case from Norristown that borough ordinances prohibiting the erecting of wooden buildings are inoperative.

Senator Mitchell has refused to pay the campaign assessment laid by the republican congressional committee. In this he appears to practice what he preaches.

A ratification meeting of the Independent Republicans will be held at Pittsbnrg on next Tuesday. Senator Stewart, Col. Duff, Col. McMichael and Major Merrick are the speakers for the occasion.

What a pity it is that Dorsey is so busily engaged just now, in trying to keep himself out of the penitentiary? He might have been very useful this fall in assisting Cameron to conduct the campaign in this State.

George Lear, chairman of the Harrisburg Convention, addressed a letter to Thomas Cooper, on June 3, in which he says the call for the delegates to meet again on June 21st is null and is nothing but a Cameron affair.

D. S. Elliott, a delegate to the Harrisburg Republican convention, from Bedford county, refuses to attend the meeting called by the chairman of the State Committee for the 21st of this month, to nominate a candidate for Congressman at-large. He claims that the functions of that body ended when it adjourned sine die, and no one has the power to call it but the people. What a muddle they are getting into.

There is great excitement in the oil regions, over the new wells that are flowing at a rate heretofore unheard of. One well gives 1,500 barrels a day and another one 900, and the oil is running away for lack of tankage. For the last five years the supply has exceeded the demand, and has accumulated in the storage tanks until upwards of 30,000,000 barrels are held in these recepticles. The result has been to send the price of oil down to a very low figure.

The candidacy of Hon. Charles R. Buckalew for Congress has been received with great favor by the people throughout the election congressional district. It does not suit some of the politicians who have an eye on the office, quite so well, but this is the people's year, and we take it that with such a man as Mr. Buckalew in the field there will be but small demand for the average candidate. It is to be hoped that there will be no contest for the position, in Columbia county.

A Washington correspondent says that Don Cameron and Logan have quarreled. The occasion was on the question of the retirement of General Sherman. Don is a member of the senate military committee, and as he is a nephew of Sherman's by marriage all his influence has been thrown in the doughty general's favor. A couple of weeks ago the military committee held a meeting at Cameron's house. During the discussion which ensued Cameron opposed the bill. Crossing over to the latter's seat, and shaking his head like an angry bull, Logen exclaimed, "I thought you were a man of your word; I'll never allow you in the future to make an agreement in committee only to break it in open session. I shall fight Sherman with all the energy of my soul.' The bill will come up again as unfinished business and a large-sized row will probably ensue before the matter shall be finely settled. Don is reported to have said that he did not propose to have Sherman retired; to which Logan said that he (Cameron) "might boss the small fry politicans of Pennsylvania, but the sort of thing was played out in Washington; that Sherman had long since passed the age fixed in the bill and ought to be on the retired list now. It is very probable, however, that Cameron will carry his point and have an exception made in Sherman's favor. The southern democrats, particulary Butler and Hampton, dislike Phil. Sheridan intensely, and as he would be made commander in-chief of the army in the event of Sherman's retirement, it is safe to assume that enough votes from that party will be cast in Sherman's favor to make his enforced retirement impossible.

THE COURT HOUSE.

The Commissioners of Columbia county on Tuesday last, as stated elsewhere, awarded the contract for building an addition to the Court House, to Hawke & Co. of Danville. This firm no doubt includes experienced builders, but as there were five other bidders, all of them lower than Hawke, and all of them practical builders, it does not appear why the contract was awarded to the highest. It cannot be because he offered better security than the other bidders, for after he had secured the contract he was looking around town for some one to go on his bond. At the first letting for the new jail in 1877 the contract was awarded to Charles Krug at $56,975, although J. R. Diehm & Co. of Pottsville bid $41,075, and the reason given by the Commissioners was that Diehm's bondsmen were all out of the county. The present board of commissioners let the Court House to a party who lives out of the county without asking who is offered as security. The letting of the jail at $16,000 more than the lowest bid was followed by an uprising of the people, and in a suit in court the commissioners were enjoined from carrying out their action. In the opinion filed in that case Judge Elwell says: "The general government in the letting of its contracts has adopted the lowest bidder principle. As before stated, it is the statutory rule in several of the largest and most wealthy counties of the State. It is the safest for the public, as well as for the character of the officers to whom are entrusted the public interests, and therefore ought to be adopted."

And again. "In order to the exercise of a sound discretion it was the duty of the Commissioners to have made such inquiry as was necessary to put them in possession of the facts in regard to the lowest bidder for this work." In the face of the facts of the case, and the law as laid down by the Court, are the tax payers willing to permit this repetition of the jail job to be carried out?

A Shameful History.

The public has long been aware of the inefficiency of the American navy, and morally certain that much dishonesty has been attached to the Navy Department, but few will be prepared to learn the extent of the organized system of fraud and barefaced robbery as disclosed by the information furnished in answer to Mr. Hewitt's resolution calling for exact details of the condition of the service. The names of sixty-eight steamers are reported, and the Department officially declares that to "make them efficient to engage in battle with an enemy of the same general classification" would require $22,524,141. Eighteen of these steamers could not be repaired under a year: some of them would need two years for overhauling, and fifteen are reported not worth repairing. The dilapidated condition in which our war vessels are shown is deplorable enough, but when it is known that this disgraceful condition of the navy is owing to the fact that the appropriations have been misapplied, and that this system of plunder was carried on under the administration of a Secretary who is now chairman of the Congressional committee which controls all other advances of money for the Department, the people have a right to be indignant. During the eight years Mr. Robeson was Secretary of the Navy, according to the report of the committee of the House, he got rid of $149,000,000. A single instance shows how the money was spent. The hull of the Tennesee appears to have cost originally, in round figures, $835,000; her engines and machinery, $764,000, in the time of war prices. The aggregate cost of repairs on the hull since she was built to October 18, 1881, is reported at $814,000, of which Secretary Robeson spent in eight years $583,000. The aggregate cost of repairs on her engines and boilers in the same period $576,000, of which Mr. Robeson managed to spend in his eight years $450,000. She cost, hull and machinery, originally $1,799,000. She has had expended on her in repairs on hull and machinery $1,390,000. This during 15 years, and of this Mr. Robeson spent in his eight years $1,030,000, leaving only $360,000 for repairs on hull and machinery during the whole remaining period; yet the Tennesee has been in active service almost the whole time since Mr. Robeson left the Navy Department, and should have needed proportionately costly repairs year by year.

Many of the ships have been repaired at a cost of one half and two-thirds their original outlay, and are now utterly worthless except for scrap iron. Yet it will be remembered that, while under Robeson as Secretary of War the Department was a mere nest for plunderers, the Republican party stood by him and voted him extra millions to squander upon the specious pretext of apprehended war with Spain, and subsequently placed him in the position he occupies to-day, where his influence is paramount in deciding upon navy estimates and expenditures.—Philadelphia Record.

The Labor Strikes.

The present labor strike, extending to fully one hundred thousand men in a single channel of industry, is the most remarkable of all the many labor disturbances of the past. While it covers the Western part of this State and all the country from Pittsburg to the Mississippi, the large iron industries of eastern Pennsylvania and Philadelphia are not affected by it, although they are embraced in the same organization that has taken issues with employees. Another exceptional feature of the strike is, that more than one hundred thousand men decline labor at the wages they received when the iron market was better than it is now, while thousands of other laborers are discharged from employment because declining business compels the reduction of labor. It is, indeed, an anomalous condition of affairs, when the Pittsburg ironworkers strike for increased wages, and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the unerring barometer of trade and business prosperity, has reduced its labor roll to the number of many hundreds on the line west of Pittsburg, and many hundreds on the line between Pittsburg and Philadelphia. These anomalous facts are not in accidental conflict. They go to the very marrow of the issue, and will, at the end, be controlling factors in solving the grave problem that now vexes employers and employed.

It is evident that the present strike cannot last long. Its large proportions are the best guarantee against a protracted struggle, and the end will be, as it always has been, the attainment of justice or approximate justice between the disputants. If our present declining markets and diminished demand for the products of our striking industries shall continue, there will be no increase of wages, and intelligent leaders in the labor movement will speedily so understand it. If business shall exhibit signs of revival and increased demand for iron, employers will yield and pay the increased rates until another depression shall come; but is there any reasonable prospect of business improving and demand increasing? Every intelligent and dispassionate observer of the currents of trade, must confess his fears that the products of our industries are more likely to be cheaper than dearer for some time to come; and if such apprehensions shall be realized, the labor strike will simply deplete the treasuries of the labor organizations until they are exhausted, and then the present or reduced wages will be accepted. In short, the strike will be successful if there shall be a permanent demand for iron at prices which will warrant the increased wages demanded, and it must be unsuccessful under all other circumstances.

It is creditable to the labor organizations of the country generally, and especially those in Pennsylvania, that they have scrupulously maintained law and order in their dispute with employers. In Milwaukee they have degraded themselves and forfeited public sympathy by turbulence and violence, but in Pennsylvania and Maryland there has been no shade of lawlessness. As long as labor shall make its issue for increased wages within the law, none can complain of its action. Whether wise or unwise, it is the exercise of an unquestioned right; but whenever it assumes to limit the rights of others who may choose to contract for themselves, or to retort to violence in any form, it becomes its own worst enemy and the enemy of public and private safety. There are evident signs of a peaceful issue in this section of the country. It may be delayed for weeks, but the prudent expressions heard from those who can speak responsibly for both sides give reasonable hope of a peaceful and perhaps cordial determination of the dispute.—Phila. Times.

A resolution was offered that if the citizens living on Third and Fourth streets would raise one third the amount of expense, and finish another third to be refunded to them in taxes, then the council should pass an ordinance that the streett be repaired. The resolution was lost, and hence the streets will not be repaired. The expence of pepairing is put at $45,000.

Keeping a Room.

A look into the girl's room will give one an idea of what kind of a woman she will probably become. A girl who keeps her clothes hung up neatly, whose room is clean always, will be very apt to make a good wife and a successful woman. Order and neatness are essential to our comfort as well as that of others about us. A girl who throws down her things anywhere will do things in a slovenly, careless way. A girl who does not make her bed until after dinner—and she should always make it herself rather than to have a servant do it—and throws her dress or bonnet down on a chair, will make a poor wife in nine cases out of ten. If all the world could could see how a girl keeps her dressing-room, many unhappy marriages would be avoided. Always be as tidy about your person and your room as if all your friends could always see you. Get into the habit of order and neatness, and it will come easy in life afterwards.

There is a great deal of dissatisfaction with the action of the commissioners in letting the contract for the addition to the court house, to the highest bidder. There may be a good reason for it, but, if so, it has not yet been made public. It will be difficult to make the tax payers understand why it is worth fifteen hundred dollars more to have the job done in Montour county than it is to have it done at home.

Another attempt at robbery was made at the store of Moses McHenry, Stillwater, on Monday evening. One of the clerks sleeps in the store. The thieves effected an entrance at the window, and were in the act of drilling into the safe, having already made three holes about an inch deep, when the clerk was awakened. The robbers became frightened and while escaping through the window, the clerk discharged his gun, the ball and shot entered the window casing and plastering. One of the robbers cried "I'm shot!" but no trace of blood was found. Asa Hess living near Stillwater was arrested and brought to jail on Tuesday evening. The clerk testified before a justice of the peace that he was one of the guilty parties.

All I ask is a trial, I will convince you that you are saving money by buying groceries here. F. S. Kinports.

The contract for additions to the court house was let on Tuesday afternoon, H. F. Hawke & Co. of Danville being the successful bidders. The bids were as follows:

Coffman & Menagh	$35,500
Hawke & Co.	10,300
J. S. Sterner	9,900
A. S. Phillips	9,779
Chas. Krug	9,490
E. Welliver	9,300
W. H. Carter	8,786

From this it will be observed that the contract is awarded to the highest responsible bidder. It will now be in order for the county commissioners to explain why they agree to give a Danville firm $1,514.00 more than W. H. Carter offers to do it for, provided he can furnish satisfactory security, and if not, then certainly some one of the other four bidders who are lower than Hawke & Co. ought to have been able to give security for the faithful fulfillment of the contract. If they could not do this then there is some excuse for the action of the commissioners.

Canfield followed with a brief address.

After the well filled baskets were disposed of the young folks engaged in various amusements.

The Orangeville Cornet Band was present and enlivened the occasion with some of its choice selections. Every thing passed off pleasantly except too fast driving along the narrows that was uncalled for and out of place, especially on such an occasion. WM. H. SNYDER, Sec'y.

Mountain Lake Park S. S. Assembly.

A great gathering of S. S. workers like that at far famed Chautauqua, but much more accessible, is something in which our local readers are interested, and we therefore give them some particulars concerning the Assembly to be held at the new religious summer resort, Mountain Lake Park, said to be one of the finest grounds for the purpose on the Continent. It is near the summit of the Alleghenies, 2700 feet above sea level, fronting on B. & O. R. R. a mile and a half in the form of a broad grassy meadow threaded by the Youghiogeny River, from which the ground rises by successive terraces broken into gentle knolls with beautiful glades between, an abundance of noble oaks supplying shade, and generous springs affording soft and cool water. Roads and walks are being constructed, many handsome cottages and other buildings are being erected, and the whole forms one of the most attractive places imaginable. The scenery is superb: a wide expanse of glade country bounded by "the backbone of the Alleghenies" at the distance of a few miles. The Assembly will be held from July 26 to Aug. 2, the exercises to consist of a Course of Lectures by some of the most popular platform speakers of the country, a Course of Normal Instruction by able and practical teachers, a series of evening entertainments, etc., For information as to the programme, address Rev. W. M. Frysinger, D. D., Secretary, Harrisburg, Pa. For information as to accommodations, address Dr. T. H. Logan, Wheeling, W. Va.

S. H. Barrett & Co.'s New United Monster Railroad Show.

The above named united World's Fair of living wonders, including the most stupendous Managerie, Caravan, Museum and Circus ever organized, will mass its multitude of amusement marvels at Catawissa on Tuesday, June 20th. Not only is it entirely new, bright and brilliant, but also a massive, solid, railroad show, owning its own splendid outfit of cars bringing savage Nature, in all the majestic illustrations of her living lessons, directly to your doors and added thereto, a far greater and purer circus than you have ever seen. No collection of rare wild beasts and birds has ever before been concentrated under canvass. Every continent has contributed to its completeness, as every equestrian organization of the great foreign capitals and every leading gymnastic school of the whole world has furnished representatives to complete the largest and most brilliant artistic circus ever organized on this continent, and one in which each performer is a special star, and one and all simply incomparable, while worlds of humorous folly and a varied programme of astonishing animal acts complete an entertainment which is the very acme of arenic achievement.

Sunday School Convention.

The 13th Annual Convention of the Columbia county S. S. Association met in the M. E. Church at Buckhorn, May 30th and 31st. This Association, which for the past few years has been struggling for existence, is now in a prosperous condition and good working order; and the convention just held was one of the most successful since its organization. Nearly fifty delegates from over twenty schools were present, and the place of meeting was filled at each session and sometimes crowded with those interested in S. S. work, from every part of the county. Every religious denomination in the county was represented and not the least pleasant feature of the convention was the cordial good will and christian fellowship which prevailed throughout its settings.

The exercises consisted principally of open discussions on various phrases of S. S. work, and the alacrity and animation with which these discussions were pursued showed the deep interest of the participants. Among the topics on the programme were: "The origin and development of Sunday schools;" "The financial relation of the church to the Sunday school;" "How to retain the larger scholars;" "Literature of the Sunday school;" "Temperance;" and others. Besides the regular programme, opportunity was given for the presentation and discussion of any questions relating to S. S. work. These discussions were interspersed with singing led by an excellent choir.

With the encouragement and instruction in S. S. work which every one at the convention received, was mingled a feeling of gratitude toward the people of Buckhorn and vicinity for their noble and generous hospitality. To be partakers of such whole-souled generosity as they showed toward every one, is of itself no slight stimulus to well-doing.

The officers for the ensuing year are: Rev. F. P. Manhart, President; G. V. Savage, Vice President; L. F. Bower, Secretary; A. W. Spear, Treasurer; Delegates to state convention: Rev. C. K. Canfield, Rev. E. M. Chilcoat—alternate. Executive committee: Rev. E. M. Chilcoat, Aaron Smith, I. W. Hartman.

As the association exists not merely for the purpose of holding a convention but to unite and direct all the S. S. workers of the county, it is desirable that they be kept in communication with each other during the year, and to further this purpose the following of district Vice Presidents were elected: Beaver, James Fox; Benton, P. Laubach; Berwick, O. Clewell; Bloom, J. Schuyler; Briarcreek, M. L. Housknecht; Catawissa, L. P. Kline; Conyngham, O. B. Millard; Centre, J. H. Aikman; Fishingcreek, D. McHenry; Franklin, to be supplied; Greenwood, P. D. Black; Hemlock, F. B. Hartman; Jackson, Theo. Smith; Locust, Samuel Camp; Madison, George Supplee; Main, Wesley John; Mifflin, Elisha Snyder; Montour, W. J. Biddleman; Mt Pleasant, Jacob Fisher; Orange, C. B. White; Pine, John Bruner; Roaring Creek, Samuel Cherington; Scott, A. B. White; Sugarloaf, Americus Fritz.

Through these the Secretary will receive reports from the various schools and in turn report to all the schools. As a complete statistical list of the S. S's of the county is desired at once, all the district Vice Presidents are requested to communicate immediately with the Secretary

To Take out Milk and Coffee Stains.

These stains are very difficult to remove, especially from light-colored and finely finished goods. From woolen mixed fabrics they are taken out by moistening them with a mixture of one part glycerine, nine parts water and one-half part aqua ammonia. This mixture is applied to the goods by means of a brush, and allowed to remain for twelve hours (occasionly renewing the moistening). After this time the stained pieces are pressed between cloth and then rubbed with a clean rag. Drying, and if possible a little steaming, is generally sufficient to thoroughly remove the stains. Stains on silk garments which are dyed, with delicate colors or finely finished are more difficult to remove. In this case five parts glycerine are mixed with five parts water, and one-quarter part of ammonia added. Before using this mixture it should be tried on some part of the garments where it cannot be noticed, in order to see if the mixture will change color. If such is the case no ammonia should be added. If, on the contrary, no change takes place, or if, after drying, the original color is restored, the above mixture is applied with a soft brush allowing it to remain on the stains for six or eight hours, and is then rubbed with a clean cloth The remaining dry substance is then carefully taken off by means of a knife. The injured places are now brushed over with clean water, pressed between cloths and dried. If the stain is not then removed, a rubbing with dry bread will easily take it off. To restore the finish, a thin solution of gum arabic, or in many cases beer is preferred, is brushed on, then dried and carefully ironed. By careful manipulation these stains will be successfully removed.

Fruit Trees.

CHANGING THE BEARING YEAR.—Every fruit grower has doubtless observed that if young trees are permitted to overbear, the next year there is not only no fruit, but no growth of berries. The tree leaves, that is all. The reason is, the tree has overdone itself, and it needs a full season to recover. In this case there is no fruit for two years. If the tree has been not so seriously crippled, it will make some growth. Then it may fruit the next year, missing one only. The way then to have crops every year is to let fruit trees bear but a moderate crop at any time. Thinning out the fruit when too many, and feeding the tree with rich food, will do much towards making trees regular bearers. Nature sometimes makes certain trees shy bearers, but compensates by having them to be regular ones as a consequence.

KEEPING FRUIT TREES GROWING.—Many of us are tempted to let our young fruit trees bear too much fruit, and the result is a stunted growth. A tree cannot bear a heavy crop of fruit and make a good growth besides. Trees which do not make a growth of two feet for the longest shoots in a season, need additional stimulating with manure, if the ground is clean and well cultivated; or if they stand in grass or happen to be encumbered with weeds, good mellow cultivation must be given them. This is the rule for young trees, and the best time, if manure is aplied, is late in autumn or during winter, the calier the better. But nature appears to do the most good on bearing trees, especially apple trees, often giving good annual crops where poor and biennial crops, were previously borne. Bearing trees need not grow so rapidly as young trees, but if they do not make annual shoots at least a foot long they need more manure, or both manure and cultivation. The manure may be spread broadcast in winter, covering the whole surface.—Tribune & Farmer.

THE DELAWARE BEET FIELDS.—The business of growing beets for sugar is still progressing in Delaware, and we give below some information about it which we find in the Sugar Beet.

"The 400 acres of land now being utilized are rented from farmers, who, by contract, attend to the plowing, cultivating, etc. It is estimated that the total cost to the acre would not exceed $40, by which rate, from present appearances, between ten to twenty tons' yield could be reasonably expected. If we accept the first figure as the exact basis, it would permit the delivery of the beets at the factory at $4 per ton (at which price 200 acres have been contracted for at Schenectady). The lands on which the company ere growing the beets, will, if satisfactory, be purchased. They are situated from one to five miles from Wilmington, and also near New Castle. Their average value is estimated at $100 per acre. This figure, of course, varies according to the location. The soil is generally a sandy loam of dark brownish color, and may be worked and well loosened to a depth of about 12 inches.

HOW TO KEEP BUTTER.—The following is said to be an excellent plan for preparing butter. Use for a package a tub somewhat tapering, with heavy staves and heads provided at both ends, so as to make a package that will not leak. In packing, the tub is turned on the small end, and a sack or cotton cloth is made to fit the tub, and into this the butter is packed until it reaches to within an inch of the groove for holding the upper head. A cloth is next laid upon the top of the butter and the edges of the sack brought over this and neatly pressed down; then the head is neatly put in its place and the hoops driven home. The package is now turned upon the large end and the sack of butter drops down, leaving a space on the sides and top. Strong brine is then poured through a hole in the small end until it will float the butter. The hole is tightly corked, and the butter is pretty effectually excluded from the air. Pure cold water will also preserve butter for a long while. We have known of butter, accidently dropped into a well of water, to be brought up seemingly as fresh and good as ever at the end of a year.

Women in Coal Mines.

The sad tale is told that the women in the colleries of England wear loose trousers, and are naked to the waist; around the waist is a leathern belt, to which a large chain is attached. This is dragged between their knees, and pulls loads of coal through long, low, damp, dark passages, the women compelled to go on all fours like brutes. In this way haul loads of coal six thousand yards a day. When it is known that the hard-hearted people who exact such work from women are English "gentlemen," owning millions, it certainly should bring the blush of shame to every citizen of that not always illustrious kingdom. The man who compels women to work on their hands and knees in coal mines must have a pretry thin soul, and we can thank providence that he therefore will not have much soul to save.

About Potatoes.

THINNING POTATO VINES.—A good practice with potatoes is to go over them when about four to six inches high and thin out all weak shoots. Each shoot is a plant "on its own hook" as soon as it is well above the ground, the old potato or set, decaying as soon as it has given a good start to the young shoots. There is no objection to two or three shoots to a hill, provided there is nourishment enough for all, and there is no overcrowding. But a weak shoot does nothing but rob the others, and out it should come, the few tubers it will produce will be too small to be of any use, and will be at the expense of the larger ones on the stronger vines. It will be found one of the most profitable things of the season to go over the potatoes and pull out weak growths. Where sets have to be cut to but an eye or two there will not be much of this to do.

THE WHITE ELEPHANT POTATO.—The White Elephant potato is said to be a sort of great merit, so far as its quality for the table goes. It is also a fairly productive sort. Mention is made of a wheelbarrow full, or 112 pounds, raised last season from one tuber cut to nineteen pieces. A very heavy mulch neutralized to a great extent, if not fully, the effects of the severe drouth. Although of good quality, and productive, it is not likely to become a popular sort, on account of its length of tuber. A tuber say six inches long and but two inches diamenter, is not the kind housekeepers like to handle. The White Elephant has that defect in some soils, though it may not have it in all.

ASHES FOR POTATOES.—The recommendation is frequently met with to use ashes as a fertilizer for potatoes. We have read of those who recommend what they call "rotten ashes" for sweet potatoes, saying there is nothing better for them. We have ourselves used ashes for common potatoes with the result of turning out very clean looking tubers. But when ashes are spoken of as a fertilizer, there must be some mistake, as of themselves they are of no value for the purpose. We are speaking of coal ashes. If wood ashes could be obtained, they would be of great value to the potato, possesing many of the elements desired by the growing plant. On heavy land coal ashes make it porous, which is of great benefit. Porous ground is always cool and moist, without being sodden, and in this way ashes can be used to great advantage on many soils.—Tribune & Farmer.

TAR WATER FOR CABBAGE WORMS.—A far-seeing man, one who probably knew what we were to undergo in the way of potato bugs, cabbage pests, etc., once said, "There may be a fortune in the odors of a skunk." That there is virtue in odors has been shown by the effectiveness of smoke from burning tar in driving out of plum orchards injurious insects. And now it is said tar water will prevent potato bugs and cabbage worms. Take two quarts gas tar in a pail, and let the tar settle. then sprinkle the vines with the water from a sprinkling pot. This has proven more affective than Paris green. It is inexpensive and perfectly reliable, and no doubt well prove equally sure death to insects of every kind on trees. This gas tar can be had for $1 a barrel, and one barrel would supply a whole township.

The scarcity and high price of cabbage the past winter, should be a reminder of the increased vigilance needed in fighting the cabbage worms the coming season.

MEN OF THE DAY.—This is a peculiar period—an epoch in which the desire for fame is universal. Everybody is anxious to rise and shine. Every boy wants to be a "Man of the Day," and every man wishes to be the apex of a cone of exhaulted humanity. But ambitions are freaksome and strange. No two individuals in the community regard fame from the same standpoint. Some men love to be formost in letters, others in painting, a few in religeon, many in politics, hundreds in commerce, all in love, several in murder, here and there one in righteousness and everybody in something. Even women want to be "Men of the Day"—that is to say, enjoy equel privileges—but they do not like to pay for their clothes, jewelry or twenty-button gloves. That they will leave to mandkind.

GIVE HIM A REST

When enfeebled by long time suffering proceeding from torpid liver, biliousness, indigestion, constipation, or sick headache, take Burdock Blood Bitters, which give rest to the weary and reinvigorates all the organs of the body. Price $1,00.

No Whiskey!

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is one of the very few tonic medicines that are not composed mostly of alcohol or whiskey, thus becoming a fruitful source of intemperance by promoting a desire for rum.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is guaranteed to be a non-intoxicating stimulant, and it will, in nearly every case, take the place of all liquor, and at the same time absolutely kill the desire for whiskey and other intoxicating beverages.

Rev. G. W. RICE, editor of the American Christian Review, says of Brown's Iron Bitters:

Cin., O., Nov. 16, 1881.
Gents:—The foolish wasting of vital force in business, pleasure, and vicious indulgence of our people, makes your preparation a necessity; and if applied, will save hundreds who resort to saloons for temporary recuperation.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS has been thoroughly tested for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, weakness, debility, overwork, rheumatism, neuralgia, consumption, liver complaints, kidney troubles, &c., and it never fails to render speedy and permanent relief.
